“Masonry Camp can make an immense change for architecture by breaking down barriers.” –Stanley Tigerman, FAIA

IMI Masonry Camp brings together BAC apprentices and young architects to experience the masonry crafts firsthand — brick and block, tile, terrazzo, stone, plaster and restoration — and to understand the advantages of collaboration between craftworkers and designers.

The two professions work not as adversaries, but as members of teams working on a design/build challenge. That team challenge requires both professions to experience each other's job, both in the design studio and on the construction site.

Hands-on sessions introduce all the masonry crafts: brick, stone, plaster, tile, restoration and terrazzo.
